Rationale of the Faculty Development Program

The rationale behind this FDP is to give all teachers an opportunity to reflect on the trends that are happening in the field of ELT today, and now where the time has come to set new trends to change, emancipate and innovate for inclusivity speed and quality of learning. Hence, the title of the program ‘Trends and Trend-setting in the Mid-21st Century’. There is certainly a need for change and therefore innovation finds pride of place in the very first session of this program.

In a world ridden by manifold distractions, especially in online learning, students are increasingly recorded low attention and concentration levels- both of which are essential for knowledge retention and better learning outcomes. In such a scenario, it is of utmost urgency and necessity for teachers to bring into their classrooms methods that hold and capture the attention of the students. This is where digital teaching and learning has its relevance. As the EdTech sector flourishes, so will the education system which will see students benefit from developing technologies.

To this end both teachers and students should over-come the fear of technology and in consonance with this teacher should be open to the need to learn to develop E-Content. Teachers can be creative with the digital platforms and digital tools can be very useful in rejuvenating the English language classroom. Therefore, digital teaching and learning and developing E-Content both find a place in this program.

English proficiency is a key factor for employment success, and advancement in life and in today’s globalized world English language is as important as the other core subject in the curriculum, designed for schools and colleges. Students should be able to use the English language, to communicate meaningfully and today, it has become a basic skill needed in any field of employment. So, teachers have to find interesting ways to teach all the four skills of the language. Young teachers themselves need to work on their writing skills as now the HRD ministry has made it mandatory for new recruits into colleges and institutions of higher learning to have published research articles and to have a doctoral degree as well. Our session on day-5 will focus on research writing.

Last but certainly not the least we cannot over emphasize the role of reflection among teachers. Reflection involves how to become more engaging teachers by learning from our students’ colleagues our own teaching methodologies and our environment. It helps us to learn from our experiences and consequently to perform productively in our classroom to create better future. Reflective teaching is a means of professional development which begins in our own classrooms. And therefore, a session on reflective teaching and learning is also part of this program.

Hope this FDP would bring a resourceful insight and gaining enrichment in all the key areas where a teacher requires for a his/her teaching learning

Teacher Development: Concerns
The repetitive nature of a teacher's job lends itself easily to falling into a set behaviour pattern
Can easily fill the teacher into an illusory sense of having 'arrived'
Teachers are usually 'sent' to one-size-fits-all workshops
Seldom are teachers asked for their specific developmental needs

A few questions ...

- (How) Can teachers WANT to reflect?
- If yes, what are the possible routes to making them see its value?
- Any alternatives to 'one-size-fits-all' workshops that teachers are 'sent' to?
- Are there more individualistic ways of engaging with teachers?
- (Why) Must they always depend on a Resource Person/Head?
- Is Reflective Practice an added expectation, over and above all the numerous tasks that a teacher has?
